Project Brief: Personal C.V. Site

I have recently gained experience in my field at two separate positions and the typical one page college resume no longer suits my needs. A site to display my experience and education would be a useful tool for job hunting in the future. As I am moving into the Information Technology field, certifications and specific skill sets would be much better represented in a site rather than a simple paper resume.

Now that I have I.T. experience at the FRIB and at TechSmith Corporation, my responsibilities at both positions need to be shown in a lot of detail as I am just starting my career. I am also planning on learning more in the coming weeks about networking in a professional setting and I am studying for the Network+ certification. Networking knowledge is going to be large part of what makes me appeal to employers and a site with in depth descriptions of my skills will be very valuable.